1. The first group of people who are interested in the study of the history of the world are the historians. They are the people who study the past and try to understand what happened and why it happened. They use a variety of sources, including books, documents, and artifacts, to reconstruct the past.
